DUNCAN MARSHALL, Manager.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 14, 1909.

The four of Dr. Simonson must be much to spread information and awaken interest in the annuity scheme devised and operated by the Dominion Government. It is perhaps unfortunate that his visit to the West occurred during the busiest season of the year. Despite this, however, the publicity given the matter by his excellent lectures, by the press reports of these and comments on them, must serve to make known in a pretty general way something at least of the meaning and purpose of the scheme and the method of its administration. This is in every way desirable, for the scheme is a good one from the point of view of the Dominion Government, and the people of the country should be given every opportunity to become acquainted with it and to take advantage of its opportunities. Ideally, the scheme is one whereby those who during the course of their lives pay into a fund established by the government, may be reaching a certain age, draw therefrom each year for the remainder of their lives, a sum proportioned to the amount they have paid in. The cost of the operation of the system is borne by the Government and not by the annuitant. On the money paid in, the annuitant is allowed and the annuity is determined by securities, as private annuity companies calculate their payments. One advantage of the scheme is that money paid in as premiums cannot be withdrawn except in the case of an annuity and when the age limit is reached. What ever his temptation, one cannot fitter away the sum that he has laid up against the years of failing strength. It cannot be sold for debt; nor can the annuity be assigned or taken by process of law. Once a person has paid money into the fund it cannot, with his consent or without it, be diverted to any other purpose, but is held until the annuity becomes due, and this is paid to himself and his heirs. In the event of his previous death the payments with interest are returned to his heirs. The plan provides an opportunity of securing an income for the days when work is no longer possible or when one may reasonably claim to be entitled to a rest. It is reported to be meeting with wide success, and must meet with still wider favor the more it becomes known.

The Minister of Labor has requested the names of the men who risked their lives to save their comrades in the mine disaster at Extension, B. C., that he may recommend them to the King Edward medal. This makes the deeds of the Winnipeg Telegram men, Mr. King, it declares, is trying to get some cheap advertising by hanging "a political placard over dead men's graves." What may be the meaning of this ornate phrase the author does not inform us. The King Edward medal is hardly an advertising "placard." Nor is it designed to hang above the graves of men, "dead" or otherwise. Viper rather than cleanness, marks the language of warmth, and something must be forgiven a journal that is plainly working under forced draught. But if the reader finds trouble in deciphering the import of the excited non-sense, he will have no trouble in detecting the motive from which it flows. That the men deserve the proposed distinction, the Telegram will hardly deny, even if they be not coal-miners and not the graduates of privilege. And that some one must call attention to their merits, if there are to be recognized by a Royal medal, is fairly clear. Who might do so with more propriety than the Minister of Labor, the Telegram is not in a sufficiently placid state of mind to suggest. All it makes clear is that it would rather see merit go unrecognized than that the recognition should come through the efforts of a Liberal Minister of the Crown.

A DISABLING ACT.

The kind of school law Manitoba has may be the exclusive business of Manitoba, but the case will require some proof, because the children growing up under that law may become residents of another Province. Alberta people have a proper concern in the kind of men and women who are to reside here in the future, they must have some right to say to the conditions under which the children who may become future residents of the Province are being brought up, or are being allowed to grow up. It is possible to carry too far the notion that each Province is exclusively concerned in the education of its own children, for these children do not always remain in that Province, and the other Provinces in which they are likely to make their future homes must be admitted a certain real, if undignified, interest in the circumstances of their upbringing. Alberta has, or may have, some concern in the Manitoba school law, too, because a few months ago officials of the Manitoba Government were promising to reproduce some of the features of that law in Alberta if the electors would only vote for Opposition candidates.

In response to an assertion by the Winnipeg Free Press that the Province of Manitoba has no law compelling the sending of children to school, the Attorney General of that Province the other day gave his side of the case. Mr. Campbell quoted, practically without comment, and apparently without endorsement, the following paragraph from the school law of Manitoba:

"Any officer, constable or policeman who apprehends, without warrant, and before a judge and jury, or girl, under the age of 16 years who is suffered to grow up without satisfactory parental control or education, or who is a habitual truant from school, or who habitually wanders about the streets or public places during school hours, without any lawful occupation or employment, or who habitually hawks or sells articles in the streets or public places during school hours or who is found wandering about at a late hour."

To this he subjoined a paragraph from the Delinquent Courts Act, the purpose and scope of which is to deal with delinquents and not with normal children. Nor did he accompany this quotation with any explanatory or connecting remarks to give it relevancy to the case. It is to be assumed therefore that the second quotation has an effect only, and may be omitted as having nothing to do with the point. An examination of the quotation reproduced above therefore reveals just how much compulsory law Manitoba has, on the authority of the Minister whose business it is to frame and enforce her laws.

It is notable that the enforcing of the law is left with the officers, constables and policemen of the Province and that it is optional with them whether they enforce it or not. Whatever be the circumstances under which the law might become effective it does not and cannot become effective unless some officer of the law, on his own motion, brings the law into play. This, of course, is a complete negation at the outset of the idea of "satisfactory parental control or education" which the law might be intended to enforce. It is a negation of the idea that the Province has any business to enforce attendance, more than to empower its law officers to do so if they see fit, and if certain conditions specified in the law are complied with. By this clause the Province lays aside entirely all responsibility for securing the attendance of children at school and leaves the matter in the hands of the police. This means, of course, that the law will be enforced or not enforced according as the policeman in a community sees fit, or according as he has been instructed by his higher officials to see fit.

And the clause makes plain also how far the policeman has power to act under the law. The conditions are clearly and explicitly outlined, and it must be assumed that under no other conditions can he take action. If a child is allowed to grow up without "satisfactory" parental control or education the policeman may take it in hand and bring it into court. The policeman is to judge whether the parental control is "satisfactory" or whether or not the child has been given any "education." Creditting the constables of that Province with every desire to enforce the law so far as they are free to do so, it must be said that the law is in an aggravated state, but the evidence cannot be called into question, is a policeman likely to undertake the trouble of "satisfying" himself with his neighbor's affairs, and of trying to prove to the court that the parental control exercised over his children is poor, or the amount of education given them is insufficiently small. A policeman usually has care enough of a mandatory character, without burying himself in matters in which his action is purely optional.

But the policeman has parental chance. If he finds a child to be an "habitual truant from school, or that it 'habitually wanders about the streets or public places during school hours without any lawful occupation or employment' he may, if so disposed, take the child into custody and bring it before a judge. Or if a child 'sells articles in the streets or public places during school hours' or 'stays on the streets late at night the policeman is allowed on his own motion to take it in hand, bring it into court and start the legal wheels going to have something or other done with it, what the Attorney General does not make clear.

This seems to be about as direct evidence as Mr. Campbell could give that there is no law compelling compulsory attendance at school in the Province of Manitoba. He concludes indeed with the assertion that "ample provision has been made for school attendance in the Province of Manitoba." Wisely, he does not say, for "securing" school attendance. In this difference between what the Attorney General does say and what he does not say lies indeed the whole point of the case. If a parent wants his child to attend school, the officers of the law are entitled and empowered to help him in compelling it to attend if they wish to do so, at least they have power to bring it into court, presumably with that end in view. But if the parent does not want his child to go to school, all he has to do is to keep it off the streets, or put it out to "lawful occupation" of some kind or other, and live on the wages it earns, and the policeman is not allowed to interfere, whether he wants to or not. To the parent who is trying to do his best to keep to his child the law may be excellent in empowering the constable to assist him, but as a means of protecting the child against the negligence or brutality of a parent it is absolutely impotent. If a parent wishes to give his child a common school education, the law can always be enforced, for the officers of the law are not allowed to interfere, whether he wants to or not. To the parent who is trying to do his best to keep to his child the law may be excellent in empowering the constable to assist him, but as a means of protecting the child against the negligence or brutality of a parent it is absolutely impotent. If a parent wishes to give his child a common school education, the law can always be enforced, for the officers of the law are not allowed to interfere, whether he wants to or not.

To this he subjoined a paragraph from the Delinquent Courts Act, the purpose and scope of which is to deal with delinquents and not with normal children. Nor did he accompany this quotation with any explanatory or connecting remarks to give it relevancy to the case. It is to be assumed therefore that the second quotation has an effect only, and may be omitted as having nothing to do with the point. Workmen on Railway Extension Escaped Death in Hurricane Jacksville, Fla., October 13.—With the hurricane lashed in the Atlantic ocean several hundred miles off Jacksonville and the reports of the suffering, interest tonight centres in the fate of the several thousand workmen employed on the Florida coast extension. The Florida East Coast Railway extension, near Jacksonville arrived at Key West this afternoon from Sugar Land, bringing the most direct news from the thousands of employed on the extension, showing when there was grave apprehension.

The maps at Boca Chico and Sugar Land were destroyed and the grade for thirty miles above Stock Island is badly damaged, but there has been no loss of life reported along the line. The Southern Pacific steamer Antilles, with Governor Santer, of Louisiana, on board, has gone ashore in Antilles 24.4, longitude 79.0. She has sent out a call for assistance to float the ship and take off the passengers.

No information as to the extent of the passenger list could be obtained here tonight. Just what damage was done to the construction of the Florida railroad line will not be known until they have made a survey.

HARLAN & WOLFE, APPLICANTS.

Great Old Country Shipbuilding Firm to Establish in Canada.

Ottawa, Oct. 13.—It is understood that incorporation of Dominion Dry Dock and Shipbuilding Company, Ltd. with application is being made to Parliament, is really the Harlan & Wolfe Company.

It was announced today that the firm for some time has been under consideration, the establishment of a dry dock in Canada and that it is the kernel of the proposition.

The decision, however, to embark upon a novel scheme tends to emphasize the proposition and it will be an easy matter to extend the scope of operations so as to embrace the construction of battleships and cruisers. The probabilities are that the Harlan & Wolfe docks will be established at Quebec, as the policy of the admiralty is not to allow a big warship to proceed up the narrow channel to Montreal, except on special occasions.

JAPAN MUST BE CONSULTED

In the Matter of Railway Construction in Manchuria.

Pekin, Oct. 13.—Japan has taken official cognizance of the reported efforts of the Canadian-American railway to arrange with China to build the New-Cheng-Tung railway, which would connect the Great Wall with the Pacific. The Japanese government yet it will maintain its right to be consulted with respect to Manchurian railways. Though Japan does not claim the right to veto a railway project, it regards subsequent action. Japan's action was precipitated by the recall of Charles R. Crane, an American minister designated to China.

WORLD'S CHAMPIONSHIP SERIES.

Total Games Played Five—Pittsburgh 4 Detroit 1.

Pittsburg 5, Detroit 4.—Pittsburg's reason tonight. There was no explanation. It was a close game, a financial and business tie-up men who have helped the Pittsburghers tonight. There was no explanation. It was a close game, a financial and business tie-up men who have helped the Pittsburghers tonight. There was no explanation. It was a close game, a financial and business tie-up men who have helped the Pittsburghers tonight.

President Hayler made a bad guess as to whether a coin in the air would fall head or tail and so the National League left the chance of a deciding game. The final score of today's game was eight to four. Fourteen minutes before the town clock Detroit had a lead, but after that all was darkness until Detroit night as had been given out. Mollie, the pitcher, made five hits and struck out many selling players, was rushed into Pittsburgh and later under cover.

Jennings. It was evidently the late time of the Tiger manager to slip Mollie the game at that time but he was warned up so well that he decided to keep Mollie out of view of every one.

It was not long until Summers showed signs of a blow up. Fred Clarke let one money blow as he saw big Mollie in the field. "I told you so, I told you Jennings," he shouted. "Put him in, put him in, till we kill him."

But Jennings decided not to put Mollie in to save him. He sent Willett into the field and in the ninth when Detroit had to make four runs out, Mollie was sent to bat, but he would be in time to get into the box and something happened. Nothing happened, however, and the game went on. Pittsburgh 8 to 4. There were things in the air today which were not to be trusted for any one, least of all by the Detroit players. The weather was so bad that the game was not to be played. There were things in the air today which were not to be trusted for any one, least of all by the Detroit players. nothing regret that he had not killed him with that pitched ball. One of the alternate sinning of games for the Pittsburghers and Detroit in the championship series, the Pittsburghers today publishes an article to the effect that the game was being tampered and manipulated from behind the scenes. It charged that Canada was tampered with in the game. The management knew he was physically and mentally out of condition. It was a large of the Tigers when it was known he had been out of condition. The article shows as follows:

"It now looks as though the next two games will break even, which will mean the playing of the tie and conclude the entire series of seven games scheduled."

When Fred Clarke, Hughes Jennings, Ben Johnson and President Hayler, reached town from Detroit and learned of the publication of the article, they could scarcely find words to demonstrate the story as a lie.

"Charges of crookedness and frame-up among the most serious matters in baseball," said Clarke. "It is an insult to the whole baseball world and I would not be surprised to see legal complications arise."

"It is a lie," said Jennings. "The man that says that is crooked. There is absolutely no truth in the article," said Ben Johnson. "The whole story looks like a frame-up," said President Hayler.
